1. Adversity. In 2013, the United States reached an educational milestone. For the first time, a majority of the country's public school students—51 percent of them, to be precise—fell below the federal government's threshold for being low income, meaning they were eligible for a free or subsidized school lunch.

With few exceptions, I would bet that most teachers feel they could be doing a better job of differentiating instruction. It's not that we don't want to do it—we know our students learn at different rates, that some need more help and others could be moving much more quickly than we let them. The problem for many of us is that we just can't figure out how to manage it.
