Timber provides an inflation hedge, given its value is not heavily reliant on financial markets. Private-equity timberland market participants, like TIMOs, tend to use fundamental valuation methodologies in their valuations of properties, which may also contribute to timberland's inflation hedging ability. In contrast, public-

Abstract. Flowering and fruiting of timber trees have been recorded in Guyana for over a century. Although the data are dispersed over a large number of non-consecutive years, from 1887 until 1989, they give a very good estimate of the probability of a species being in flower or fruit in a certain month.
