The opening scene in Grist Mill Road is the stuff of which nightmares are formed. Three young teens in a brutal, savage act that goes beyond all measure of comprehension. One will lose an eye and live with those nightmares forever. One will live with the guilt of doing, saying nothing and one will go to jail for the crime.

The Grist Mill When Great-grandfather came to Hubbardton, Vermont, around 1769 he couldn't buy ground flour at the store as Father could. He took his grain down the road to Nathan Rumsey's grist mill by Austin Pond. There it was ground into flour. Great-grandfather carried the corn or wheat to the mill by loading it in bags onto the wagon and driving it down.
