What is "African" History? History is the study and interpretation of the past. Knowledge about the past is vital to our individual and collective understanding of our identities and position in local, regional, and global communities. While the study of history has its detractors,

History is the study and interpretation of the past. Knowledge

In 1919, The New School for Social Research opened with courses in the social sciences, social work, and public affairs. The school did not seek to be a university; it did not offer formal degrees. The founders "several of them "new historians" sought to make education relevant to the issues of the day, to remain ever new.
